CONFERENCE
The corno da caccia (trompe de chasse, cor de chasse, Jagdhorn, Waldhorn, hunting horn) was one of the key figures of the sixteenth and seventeenth century courts soundscape. It was initially conceived for the hunting field but soon enough it turned into a social and political status symbol and later it achieved a prominent role in the orchestra, both in the instrumental and theatrical production. European court studies have already shed light on some of the similarities and differences that characterised the diffusion and circulation of cultural, musical, iconographic and organological models related to this instrument. The goals of the conference are to retrace its pathway between Paris, Vienna, some German and Italian courts (including the Savoy court) and to verify, on a practical level, the similarities and differences mentioned above.

Contribution proposals aimed at:
− Identifying the spreading and circulation patterns of the hunting horn, its usage and repertoires in Europe.
− Studying the role and contribution of music in ceremonial and in the institutions of the Ancien Régime, as well as in diplomatic relations between courts, with a special focus to the production intended for hunting
− Analysing the musical topics (hunting, pastoral, military, rituals)
− Identifying and illustrating specific case studies extending the research to the role of the instrument during french revolution, napoleonic age and restoration.
− Discussing Jan Miel’s cycle at the Venaria palace
